A Household Central Station

Miss Mary Richardson, an English woman of wealth, is a trader of note, being the principal shareholder and the manager of the stores connected with the asthetic settlement at Bradford park, London. Household supplies of all sorts. including meats, flowers, wines, etc., are furnished in these stores, there being in all 14 departments, besides a post office managed by girls. Miss Richardson proposes to teach woman pupils the management of a large result business.

The Principle at Stake.

It may be that some women would not care to use the franchise if they had it That is their concern, not ours. Voters who do not care to vote may be counted by thousands among men. Be that as it may, we are no more justified in refusing a human being a right, because he may not choose to exercise it, than we are in refusing to pay him his due because he may board the money.-Charles Kingsley.

CHANGING PIANISTS.

Interesting.

"As interesting as anything I've seen in this town," said a visitor to the city, "was a change of pianists that I saw in a variety theater. There was a man on the stage singing a song, and the pianist that I say in a variety theater. There was a man on the stage singing a song, and the pianist that I say in the stage singing a song, and the pianist that I say in the day. Among the speakers were two from Toledo—Mrs. Fannie Segur Foster upon "Women In Business Life" and Mrs. S. Isadore Miner upon "The Vocations Open to Women." myself and saw coming down the aisle a man that I judged must be the relief pi-anist, and so he was. I imagined that he would sit down for a moment and wait, but, dear me, I was very slow. "He was approaching the piano at the bass end of the keyboard. When he had almost reached the corner of the piano, the man who was playing began gently sliding off the seat to the right, still playing. By this time the relief was abreast of the bass keys, and these the first player, who was still sliding steadfly to the right, now relinquished to him, and then the newcomer, still standing, but also moving stendily to the right, struck in in perfect time and tune.

"There was a brief time, a second or two, when both men were playing-the retiring pianist the treble and the on-coming player the bass—and for a frac-tion of a second they were both standing. But now the new player is fairly opposite the center of the keyboard. He ettles into the seat, and now it is his hand that strikes the treble, and now the whole piano resounds to his resolute

"In fact, there never was a minute when the piano had anything to say about it. There never was a minute when the men were not completely masters of the situation. There never was proached until he was firmly settled in his sent when both men were not continuously in motion, but the change was made without a jar or a slur in the music and without the omission of a note." -New York Sun.

To Kill a Lobster.

When a live lobster is required for boiling or other purposes, here is a sim-ple and comparatively painless mode of killing it: Run a long, narrow bladed knife into the tail at the third joint from the end, having the blade slant downward. This will cut the spinal cord, and death will quickly follow.
